A mesmerising festival of colours and culinary delights

The Bunt Eventrestaurant in Vienna’s 13th Hietzing district is certainly a jewel in the town’s culinary crown. Vibrant interiors, an enchanting garden full of scented flowers and fresh vegetables and a delicious food menu await guests.

Bunt is the German word for colourful, and colourful the restaurant certainly is. Wherever you look, even the smallest thing is created with passion and colour, just like the textiles used in the garden, which are handmade every year in different designs matching the many surrounding plants. Ambience, service, quality and attention to detail are key for Michaela Robatsch, who has managed the Bunt Eventrestaurant since 2011 together with her partner, restaurant owner Georg Zorga. “We are different, that is what people tell us over and over. Guests walk into our garden, our restaurant and feel at ease right away. I think it is because we do everything with heart and mind and our passion for detail can literally be sensed. You enter a different world – a colourful one,” Michaela explains.

Three rooms are decorated in gorgeous colour schemes, a souvenir shop is part of the venue and the walls are graced with art painted by Georg Zorga himself.

The cuisine is a blend of Viennese specialties and international classics, sometimes with a spicy twist. “Our bestseller is of course the Wiener Schnitzel and our delicious Erdäpfelsalat (potato salad), some say it is the best to be known far and wide.” Other house specialities are made from fresh ingredients – some sourced straight from the restaurant’s garden. “We are diverse and offer a wide spectrum, but authenticity and credibility of our dishes are key,” Michaela explains.

The place has also become a sought after event venue and is already fully booked for this year’s Christmas season. It is the perfect place to celebrate a special occasion. “Everyone was amazed by the gorgeous decoration and the cosy atmosphere. The friendly and competent service staff made sure that things ran smoothly,” reads a client testimonial on the Bunt website. For Michaela this is no surprise as she confesses: “I only get positive feedback from our guests!”
